

ABSTRACT

An information processing terminal stores beforehand an originator identifier for identifying the information processing terminal itself, and transmits external information including the originator identifier. An optical output unit
5 receives the external information transmitted from the information processing terminal, and produces one mode of optical output among three or more output modes under a multistage control according to the external information. The optical output unit thus outputs softly the external information obtained by the information processing terminal.